DR. AUG. C. KINNEY

Dead at Fabiola Sanitarium in Oakland, Cal.

WIFE AND BROTHER WITH HIM

Distinguished Citizen of Oregon—
Honored Member of the Great
Craft of Medicine and Surgery—
Grief Manifest on All Sides.

Dr. August C. Kinney, of this city, is no more!

The sad intelligence of his death reached this city last evening at 7 o'clock, and came by wire from Dr. Alfred Kinney, who with his sister, Mrs. Eliza Payton, of Redlands, California; his brother, Marshall J. Kinney, of Portland; and the devoted wife, Mrs. Jane W. Kinney, was at the bedside of the doctor, in the Fabiola Sanitarium, at Oakland, California, when the dread summons came.

Ever since the 10th of the present month, when it was known that Dr. August Kinney had undergone a serious operation at that famous institution, for kidney trouble of long standing, there has been a notable current of anxiety hanging over this community, where the deceased physician was profoundly revered, as one of its leading and most public spirited citizens, and the news, though not entirely unexpected, was received with deep sorrow, on all sides. Accompanied by the kinsmen named, the remains will be brought north, leaving San Francisco today, and the funeral and interment will be held at Salem, where the family owns a plot in the Odd Fellows' cemetery, and where a number of the elder generations of the family were laid in final rest; the following members of the family going from here tomorrow to attend: Mrs. Jane Smith and Mrs. Joseph E. Walker, of San Francisco, the latter now a guest at the home of Mrs. Smith, and both sisters of the lamented dead. Hon. John H. Smith, and A. M. Smith, of this city, nephews of Dr. Kinney, being now at the Capitol City on business, and who were apprised of the sad circumstances last evening on their arrival in Portland, having left here on the 6:10 express.

It is a difficult matter to state the real estimate in which Dr. August Kinney was held in this community, where for the better part of two generations he has figured as the friend, the student, the healer, the guide, the man of affairs, the leader, and champion of all things that were for the good of humanity. His gentleness, his culture; his active mind always charged with some high purpose; his unflinching kindness, and strong, practical, loyal devotion to the city and state, made him at once a conspicuous and honored type of the very best citizenship known, here, and all over the State of Oregon. His death is taken as a personal loss throughout this city and county and this conception of the fact is justified by the breadth of expression incidental to the receipt of the news of last night.

Burdened for years with a malady of his own that defied his own deep knowledge of medicine and physics, as well as that of his brethren in the great craft, this man, brave and aspiring, gave up his troubled years to the noble quest of a mastery of still another merciless disease, tuberculosis, and this search he pursued, in and out of season, with a devotion rarely equalled and yet crowned with a measure of success that has made him famous in two hemispheres, as his latest acquisitions will demonstrate when they shall be published to the world. Astoria mourns him sincerely, and with a grateful sense of the good, the honor, he conferred upon her always.

The doctor was born in Muscatine, Iowa, in July, 1845, and was therefore in his 63rd year. He was a son of Robert C. and Eliza L. B. Kinney, and with his parents, crossed the plains in 1847, to Oregon, the family settling in the Chehalis Valley, in Yamhill County. There he grew to boyhood, attending school at Forest Grove and at McMinnville, always with the ambition to enter the career of medicine and surgery, which laudable hope was fulfilled when he was admitted to Willamette University and there passed the prescribed course with brilliant success. Later he went to Bellevue Hospital, in New York City, to perfect himself in his chosen calling, devoting two years more to study and during which time he was appointed to the position of physician on the house staff at the Charities & Corrections Hospital, at Blackwell's Island.

Returning to the Pacific Coast he entered upon the practice of his profession at Portland, later coming to Astoria, where he made his home through all the rest of the years allotted to him; and where, in 1866, he married Miss Jane Welch, who still survives him and mourns his loss most grievously. No children were born of the union.

Dr. August Kinney has always been notable for his deep interest in the great enterprises that contributed to the expansion of the State. He was one of the men who strove valiantly for the building of the jetties at the mouth of the Columbia river; he was in the forefront of the huge work of the locks at the Cascades; his influence was large, and unflagging in the inauguration of the Astoria & Columbia River Railway, and in many another far-reaching enterprise, his hand and heart was engaged for the good of the whole people. In this city, there is scarcely a public movement of moment that does not bear the indelible impress of his earnest interest and practical help. And it is to this universality of thought and activity that he owes, and owns, the grateful memory of all Oregon.

Dr. Kinney and his wife have spent the winter in Europe where the doctor visited all the universities where they were experimenting in his specialty of tuberculosis. He was returning home by the way of California and when he was too ill to proceed he went to the Fabiola Sanitarium.

To Favor Patrons—

With a view of favoring very many of the patrons of the opera house who cannot get away from their businesses until a late hour, Manager Hanlin, of the Astoria opera house, announces that in all big events hereafter, he will hold the curtain back until the hour of 9 o'clock; and this will be the case next Saturday night on the occasion of the presentation of "The Burgomaster." He feels it is due those who cannot get there sooner, and is will in no wise shorten the play, that being given to its last line, as usual.

Oregon Bankers' Meeting—

The annual meeting of the Oregon Bankers' Association will be held at Portland and J. E. Higgins, cashier of the Astoria National Bank left on last evening to attend as he is an officer of the association. From there he will journey to California and will spend the Easter holidays with his daughter who is attending Stanford University.

Gone to Alaska—

August Lenons left last night for Seattle. He will remain there a few days and will then go to Taku Harbor where he will be engaged in the business of John L. Carlson. Mr. Laneons will remain in Alaska for probably 16 months.

"What Women Will Do."

Harry Jackson's latest success, as presented by the Holden Bros. & Edwards Company is considered the best melodrama now playing at popular prices, and bids fair to do a big business at the Astoria Theatre, Sunday, March 29th. Both press and public throughout the country agree that it contains more heart interest, stirring climaxes, and better scenic effects than any drama produced this season. It is easy to understand this when one takes into consideration that Mr. Harry Jackson, the author, chose for his subjects the best characters and strongest situations contained in Charles Dickens' great story, David Copperfield. And by adding to these some novel ideas of his own has manufactured a play far above the average. Among the many novelties introduced may be mentioned the great shipwreck scene, the hand-to-hand fight in the storm, the old ship turned upside down on the beach where dwells the famous old Peggotty family, and the village churchyard in winter, in which scene is introduced the greatest dramatic situation ever achieved by two women characters, viz.: Rosa Dartle and Emily. The play abounds in beautiful situations and stirring climaxes, and the patrons of the Astoria will no doubt enjoy the Dickens play.
